UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
NORTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA

10 ELBERT HARRIS,

11 Plaintiff,

No. C 08-2353 PJH

12 v.

13 CITY AND COUNTY OF SAN FRANCISCO, et al.,

ORDER GRANTING DEFENDANTS'
MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT IN PART AND DENYING IT IN PART

14 Defendants.

15 _____ /
16 Defendants' motion for summary judgment came on for hearing before this court on 17 July 29, 2009. Plaintiff appeared by his counsel Curtis G. Oler, and defendants appeared 18 by their counsel Deputy City Attorney Adelmise R. Warner. Having read the parties' papers 19 and carefully considered their arguments and the relevant legal authority, and good cause 20 appearing, the court hereby GRANTS the motion in part and DENIES it in part, as follows.

21 INTRODUCTION

22 This is an employment case alleging wrongful termination, retaliation, and 23 harassment on the basis of race. Plaintiff Elbert Harris III ("Harris") is a 48-year-old 24 African-American man. From 1984 until 2008, he was employed as a Civil Service Class
25 2302 Certified Nursing Assistant ("CNA") at Laguna Honda Hospital and Rehabilitation 26 Center ("Laguna Honda"), operated by the Department of Public Health of defendant City 27 and County of San Francisco ("the City"). From the time he was hired until 2007, he had 28 no disciplinary action taken against him.

Following an altercation on March 19, 2008 between Harris and defendant Larry Bevan (“Bevan”), employed as a Psychiatric Technician at Laguna Honda, Harris was suspended without pay pending an investigation into whether he had violated the City’s policy against workplace violence.

Harris filed administrative charges of discrimination with the California Department of Fair Employment and Housing (“DFEH”) and the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (“EEOC”) on May 6, 2008. He filed the present action on May 7, 2008, asserting claims of racial discrimination and retaliation under Title VII of the 1964 Civil Rights Act (“Title VII”), 42 U.S.C. § 2000e, et seq.; the Fair Employment and Housing Act (“FEHA”), California Government Code § 12900, et seq.; and 42 U.S.C. § 1981. Defendants are the City, Bevan, and Robert Thomas (“Thomas”), the Director of Human Resources at Laguna Honda. Harris received right-to-sue notices from DFEH on May 19, 2008, and from the EEOC on June 6, 2008.

14 Harris was terminated on May 16, 2008 after he refused to comply with certain non-15 disciplinary actions set by the City as a condition of his continued employment, following 16 the investigator's recommendations. On July 25, 2008, he filed another charge 17 concurrently with DFEH and the EEOC, and received right-to-sue letters on July 25 and 18 August 8, 2008. He amended the complaint on September 21, 2008.

19 Harris alleges six causes of action: (1) discrimination in violation of § 1981, against 20 all defendants; (2) discrimination in violation of Title VII, against the City; (3) retaliation in 21 violation of Title VII, against all defendants; (4) discrimination in violation of FEHA, against 22 the City; (5) retaliation in violation of FEHA, against the City; (6) harassment in violation of 23 FEHA, against all defendants. Defendants now seek summary judgment on all six causes 24 of action.

BACKGROUND

26 Laguna Honda is the largest single-site municipally-owned and -operated skilled 27 nursing facility in the United States. It provides a full range of skilled nursing services to 28 disabled or chronically ill adult residents of San Francisco, including specialized care for

1 those with wounds, head trauma, stroke, spinal cord injuries, orthopedic injuries, AIDS, and 2 dementia. The hospital also has a hospice program.

3 As a CNA, Harris assisted Laguna Hospital staff by maintaining patients' personal 4 hygiene and comfort, assisting with minor treatments, moving patients when necessary, 5 maintaining a safe and clean environment for patients, reinforcing instruction and 6 counseling to patients, and accompanying patients to recreational or diversional activities.

7 On September 7, 2007, Thomas received a verbal complaint from Bevan, who 8 claimed that Harris had threatened him and had used inappropriate language toward him 9 the previous day, while on Laguna Honda property. Bevan memorialized his complaint in a 10 letter dated September 8, 2007, which Thomas received on September 11, 2007.

11 In his complaint, Bevan stated that he and Harris had had a disagreement on 12 September 6, 2007, while in the parking lot of Laguna Honda, regarding some discussion 13 that had taken place during a union meeting the week before. Harris wanted Bevan to 14 apologize for using profanity at the union meeting, and Bevan refused because he could 15 not recall using any profanity.

16 Bevan claimed that Harris became very agitated and used a loud tone of voice 17 during the September 6 discussion. According to Bevan, Harris said he could not respect 18 Bevan as a man, and warned Bevan that he (Harris) was from Bayview Hunter's Point, that 19 he wanted to get rid of Bevan as a shop steward, and that Bevan would have to deal with 20 him (Harris) if Bevan remained at Laguna Honda.

21 Bevan claimed that as the discussion proceeded, Harris became louder and more 22 agitated, and then began to move toward Bevan until he was less than six inches from 23 Bevan's face. Bevan asserted that at least twice, Harris gestured with his hands, pointing 24 at his eyes and then directing his hands to Bevan's face, as if to say that he was watching 25 Bevan.

26 Harris tells a somewhat different story. He claims that at some point shortly before 27 September 6, 2007, at a "town hall meeting" at Laguna Honda, Bevan was addressing a 28 group of co-workers when he began "screaming at the group, pointing his fingers at us,

1 using extreme profanity, referring to females in the group as bitches, and shouting ‘kiss my 2 ass’ as he stormed out of the room.”

3 Harris contends that on September 6, 2007, he encountered Bevan at the Nursing 4 Office, and asked him to step outside for a moment in the presence of three other 5 employees. Harris claimed that he spoke “quietly” with Bevan, suggesting that the 6 language and profanity he had used at the town hall meeting were inappropriate, and that 7 Bevan should apologize to that group. According to Harris, Bevan told him he would never 8 apologize. Harris’ response was that he could not respect Bevan as a man if he did not 9 offer that apology.

10 After being advised of Bevan’s verbal complaint on September 7, 2007, Thomas 11 decided to recommend placing Harris on unpaid administrative leave pending an 12 investigation into the allegations. Thomas asserts that this recommendation was made 13 pursuant to § A8.341(A) of the San Francisco City Charter, which provides that “[p]ending 14 investigation of conduct involving . . . [various improper actions, including] mistreatment of 15 persons, . . . the appointing officer may place the accused person on unpaid 16 administrative leave for no more than 30 days unless the investigation shall be delayed 17 beyond such time by the act of the accused person.”

18 The Department held a Skelly meeting¹ on September 10, 2007. At the conclusion 19 of the meeting, Thomas advised Harris that he would be placed on administrative leave 20 effective as of the close of business on September 11, 2007. Following an investigation by 21 a Senior Personal Analyst, Thomas determined that Harris had not violated the policy 22 against workplace violence. As recommended by the investigator, Thomas met with Harris 23 to counsel him that raising one’s voice and arguing in public is inappropriate in the 24 workplace, and that co-workers should be treated with courtesy and respect. Susan Stofan 25 (the SEIU Local 1021 representative) met several times with both Harris and Bevan in an 26 effort to mediate the matter. The City returned Harris to full duty effective October 7, 2007, 27

28 ¹ Skelly v. State Personnel Bd., 15 Cal. 3d 194, 215 (1975), grants notice and a right to be heard to all California public employees before discipline is imposed.

1 with payment of all back wages missed during his administrative leave.

2 Harris asserts that although he complained to Thomas concerning what he 3 describes as "Bevan's violation of violence in the workplace policy during a town hall 4 meeting at Laguna Honda when . . . Bevan shouted at a group of persons, including me, 5 using extreme profanity and threatening language," no disciplinary action was taken against 6 Bevan following this incident.

7 Approximately six months later, on March 19, 2008, Thomas received a phone call 8 from Nursing Director Lenora Jacobs, asking him to activate the hospital's Staff Incident 9 Response Team ("SIRT"). Ms. Jacobs stated that Nursing Office staff were distressed 10 following an altercation between Harris and Bevan. After speaking with Ms. Jacobs, 11 Thomas contacted Dr. Brenda Austin, the hospital's Clinical Psychologist, to facilitate the 12 SIRT intervention, and asked her to report back to him her findings and recommendations.

13 Later that day, Dr. Austin met with Thomas and Mr. Ramirez, to discuss what she 14 had learned from staff and had observed in the SIRT meeting. According to Dr. Austin, 15 Nursing Office staff told her that Harris came into the Nursing Office to find his wife's 16 paycheck. (Harris' wife, Joycelyn Harris, is also a CNA at Laguna Honda.) As Harris was 17 rummaging through the box holding the paychecks or paystubs, Grace Gancayco, the clerk 18 on duty that morning, tried to help him. However, she could not find the paycheck. She 19 then asked Harris to step outside of the office, and said she would try to find the paycheck.
20 Harris allegedly began to berate Ms. Gancayco, saying things such as "You're 21 incompetent."

22 Bevan states in his declaration that he was sitting in an adjacent room in the Nursing 23 Office, and heard the commotion and loud voices coming from the area where Harris and 24 Ms. Gancayco and Mr. Harris were. Bevan came out to assist, and asked Harris to leave 25 the Nursing Office so he (Bevan) and Ms. Gancayco could help him. Harris refused to 26 leave, and continued to shuffle through the box of paychecks, attempting to locate his 27 wife's paycheck. Bevan claimed that Harris struck his arm, and continued to insult and bait 28 him (Bevan).

1 Ms. Saez-Fontillas and Ms. Kaminsky were in the adjacent room where Bevan had 2 been previously. Dr. Austin states that both Ms. Saez-Fontillas and Ms. Kaminsky told her 3 that they were frightened by Harris' tone. She states that Ms. Hunt and Ms. Griffith told her 4 they were passing by at the end of the incident and saw Harris walking from the Nursing 5 Office looking angry and agitated. Ms. Hunt also told Dr. Austin that she was upset 6 because she had had a previous incident with Harris. Dr. Austin reported that the Nursing 7 Office staff all indicated that they were personally afraid of what Harris might do during the 8 incident, which occurred in a small office. Dr. Austin also stated that Ms. Kaminsky and 9 Ms. Griffith were tearful at times as they recounted the incident to her.

10 Raymond Glover, a CNA at Laguna Honda, states in his declaration that on the 11 morning of March 19, at about 8:15 a.m., he was in the Nursing Office conversing with Ms.
12 Gancayco when Harris walked in and asked Ms. Gancayco about his wife's paystub.
13 According to Mr. Glover, as Harris was leaving through the pay envelopes, Bevan walked 14 into the office and attempted to snatch the envelopes from Harris' hands. Harris said 15 something to the effect of "Why are you grabbing the pay stubs from me?" or "Don't ever 16 attempt to grab anything from my hands again." Glover states that he heard Bevan telling 17 Harris to step out of the office, but that he never heard Harris raise his voice.

18 Harris also describes the incident in his declaration, stating that his wife had been 19 unable to locate her pay envelope, and that he had gone into the Nursing Office to see if he 20 could locate it for her. He admits that he walked into the office without permission, but 21 claims that it was routine for people to enter to locate pay envelopes. He saw no staff 22 when he entered, but states that Ms. Gancayco then came in from the next room. He 23 asked her where the pay envelopes were located, and she pointed to a box on the table.

24 Harris claims that as he was leafing through the envelopes looking for his wife's 25 envelope, "among numerous other pay envelopes," Bevan "walked in and without warning 26 or notice, abruptly attempted to physically snatch the pay envelopes from my hands at 27 which time I told him never to attempt to take anything from my hand again." Harris insists 28 that "at no time" did he "hit, touch, or 'smack' . . . Bevan or attempt or threaten to hit, touch

1 or ‘smack’ him in any manner. He also denies raising his voice during the incident.

2 Harris also provides a declaration from Sophie Mace, the night Nursing Supervisor, 3 who states that she asked Ms. Gancayco whether she was afraid, and she said, “No.” In 4 addition, Ms. Maces states that although she was the highest-ranked employee at night, 5 she was not questioned by anyone regarding the March 19, 2008 incident.

6 After his discussion with Dr. Austin, Thomas decided to recommend to John 7 Kanaley, Laguna Honda’s Executive Administrator, that the Department place Harris on 8 unpaid administrative leave for 30 days pending an investigation into the allegation that, on 9 March 19, 2008, he had entered the Nursing Office without permission, and had been 10 verbally abusive and acted inappropriately toward staff. Thomas says that Mr. Kanaley 11 (who is no longer alive) concurred with Thomas’ recommendation.

12 The Department scheduled a Skelly meeting with Harris for the following day, March 13 20, 2008. Following the meeting, Thomas sent Harris a letter, also signed by Mr. Kanaley, 14 notifying Harris that he was on unpaid administrative leave, effective March 20, 2008, 15 pending an investigation of mistreatment of persons and violence in the workplace, based 16 on the March 19, 2008 incident.

17 Thomas immediately assigned Rhonda Lunsford, a Senior Personnel Analyst from 18 San Francisco General Hospital, to investigate the allegations against Harris. Ms. Lunsford 19 states in her declaration that she interviewed relevant witnesses who were identified to her 20 by Laguna Honda, and others who were disclosed to her during the investigation.

21 Ms. Lunsford states that after analyzing the information obtained from the interviews, 22 as well as the documents, she concluded that Harris and Bevan had an on-going personal 23 conflict that stemmed back to September 2007, and which had not been adequately 24 resolved. She also concluded that the incident that occurred on March 19, 2008, would 25 likely occur again unless both Harris and Bevan addressed their personal conflicts and 26 acknowledged the Department’s expectations regarding their interpersonal relationships 27 and demeanor in the workplace. She believed that both Harris and Bevan had an equal 28 responsibility to address those issues.

1 On April 4, 2008, Dr. Austin provided Thomas with a report regarding the SIRT
2 intervention. She recommended that the hospital install a glass partition on the Nursing 3 Office door, and that the hospital also consider establishing alternative methods of 4 distributing the paychecks, and requiring each employee to pick up his or her own 5 paycheck.

6 On April 17, 2008, Ms. Lunsford provided Thomas with a report containing a 7 summary of her investigation, her findings, and her recommendations as to the appropriate 8 course of action with respect to both Harris and Bevan. She found that Harris had been 9 abusive (loud and demeaning) to Ms. Gancayco, and had refused to step outside the 10 Nursing Office despite multiple requests. She also found that Bevan had initially gotten 11 involved in an attempt to defuse the situation between Harris and Ms. Gancayco. She 12 found that even though Bevan did not reach over to take the paystubs (or paychecks) from 13 Harris' hands, he (Bevan) was calm and respectful.

14 On the other hand, Ms. Lunsford found that Harris was upset and had called Bevan 15 various names and made what appeared to Bevan to be threats of violence. She 16 concluded that Harris had initiated the aggression, which had negatively affected the entire 17 Nursing Staff; that he was unable to de-escalate himself during the exchange with Bevan; 18 and that he had refused to take any responsibility for the incident.

19 Nevertheless, Ms. Lunsford concluded that both Harris and Bevan had responsibility 20 for addressing their ongoing interpersonal conflicts, and suggested that if they did not 21 resolve their issues, it was likely that they would have additional conflicts in the future. She 22 recommended that both Harris and Bevan be reassigned to other sites (outside Laguna 23 Honda) for a period of no less than three months, so that the following interventions could 24 be accomplished and provided in a neutral setting. For each, she recommended

25 (1) 16 hours of anger management training; 26 (2) 8 hours of conflict resolution training;
27 (3) a mediated conflict resolution and communication session between Harris 28 and Bevan by an outside, professional mediator;

1 (4) an agreement between Harris and Bevan that they understand the 2 parameters of their working relationship, and that they will utilize respectful communication 3 and methods to address future conflicts between them; and

4 (5) a written acknowledgment from both Harris and Bevan that they have read 5 and understand the Department and City Violence in the Workplace Policies and the 6 Harassment Free Workplace Policies.

7 Thomas reviewed Ms. Lunsford's report with the Chief Nursing Officer. They both 8 concurred with Ms. Lunsford's recommendations, finding them reasonable, and equally 9 applicable to both Harris and Bevan. Thomas also believed the recommended procedures 10 would give Harris and Bevan time to cool off and to learn techniques for managing their 11 personal conflicts.

12 Harris and Bevan were advised that the Department had adopted the 13 recommendations, and would require each to participate in the recommended measures.
14 Thomas states that Bevan participated in all the measures that did not require Harris' co-15 participation, including being reassigned to San Francisco General Hospital for three 16 months. However, Harris refused to participate in any of the interventions that involved 17 Bevan, or that involved admitting any responsibility for the March 19, 2008 incident.

18 The Department offered to make Harris whole by paying him his wages lost during 19 the investigation, and also enlisted the help of SEIU Local 1021 representatives in an 20 attempt to convince Harris to participate in the recommended measures. As of May 6, 21 2008, however, Harris continued to refuse to accept the directive to participate in the 22 recommended programs. Thus, Thomas recommended that the Department terminate 23 Harris' employment. The Department scheduled a Skelly meeting for May 16, 2008, to give 24 Harris another opportunity to respond to the proposed action.

25 The Department held the Skelly meeting as scheduled. Following the meeting, 26 Thomas recommended to Mr. Kanaley that Harris be dismissed from employment. On May 27 16, 2008, Mr. Kanaley sent Harris a notice of dismissal, advising him that the Department 28 had decided to terminate his employment for failure to follow the directions of management

1 to take appropriate steps necessary to modify his behavior in compliance with the 2 Department's policies prohibiting workplace violence.

3 On May 22, 2008, Harris responded to the notice of termination, objecting to the 4 "false representations" by Mr. Kanaley in the notice. He argued that he had not violated the 5 policy against workplace violence. In the declaration he submitted in opposition to 6 defendants' motion, he asserts that he is "a soft spoken Christian Minister continuing to 7 practice his faith in the City and County of San Francisco."

8 He states that he "enjoy[s] a reputation" for never using profanity or raising his voice 9 among his fellow employees, friends, associates, and family members, and denies that he 10 raised his voice or put his hands on Bevan. He provides declarations from various people 11 (including his wife) who testify to the fact that he is "soft-spoken," "even-tempered," "well-12 mannered," and "easy-going," and that he "never raises his voice." He also provides a 13 declaration from a psychologist (Dr. Zacher) who has been treating him for depression, who 14 states that in her opinion, Harris does not need anger management or conflict resolution 15 training to avoid violence in the workplace.

16 In sum, Harris' main complaint, and the underlying basis for his lawsuit, is his belief 17 that he was treated unfairly because he was placed on unpaid administrative leave during 18 the investigation of the March 19, 2008 incident, while Bevan, who is white, was not. He 19 believes that the motive for disciplining him by placing him on unpaid administrative leave 20 was discriminatory, based on his race. He also claims that he made complaints about 21 Bevan's behavior, but nothing was ever done in response – in contrast to the response 22 when Bevan complained in September 2007 about Harris' behavior.

23 The City asserts that Harris was terminated because he refused to perform the 24 required actions following the investigation of the March 19, 2008 incident (take 16 hours of 25 anger management training and 8 hours of conflict resolution; engage in a mediated 26 communication session with Bevan; sign an agreement with Bevan that both understand 27 the parameters of their working relationship, and that they have read and understood the 28 Department's and the City's policies re workplace violence).

DISCUSSION

2 A. Legal Standard

3 Summary judgment is appropriate when there is no genuine issue as to material 4 facts and the moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56.
5 Material facts are those that might affect the outcome of the case. Anderson v. Liberty 6 Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 248 (1986). A dispute as to a material fact is “genuine” if there 7 is sufficient evidence for a reasonable jury to return a verdict for the nonmoving party. Id.

8 A party seeking summary judgment bears the initial burden of informing the court of 9 the basis for its motion, and of identifying those portions of the pleadings and discovery 10 responses that demonstrate the absence of a genuine issue of material fact. Celotex Corp.
11 v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 323 (1986). Where the moving party will have the burden of proof 12 at trial, it must affirmatively demonstrate that no reasonable trier of fact could find other 13 than for the moving party. Southern Calif. Gas. Co. v. City of Santa Ana, 336 F.3d 885, 14 888 (9th Cir. 2003).

15 On an issue where the nonmoving party will bear the burden of proof at trial, the 16 moving party can prevail merely by pointing out to the district court that there is an absence 17 of evidence to support the nonmoving party’s case. Celotex, 477 U.S. at 324-25. If the 18 moving party meets its initial burden, the opposing party must then set forth specific facts 19 showing that there is some genuine issue for trial in order to defeat the motion. See Fed.
20 R. Civ. P. 56(e); Anderson, 477 U.S. at 250.

21 B. Defendants’ Motion

22 1. Discrimination claims

23 Harris alleges claims of racial discrimination under Title VII and FEHA. “A person 24 suffers disparate treatment in [his or her] employment when he or she is singled out and 25 treated less favorably than others similarly situated on account of race.” Cornwell v. Electra 26 Central Credit Union, 439 F.3d 1018, 1028 (9th Cir. 2006).

27 Evidence of discrimination may be direct or indirect. To prevail on a claim of 28 discrimination based on disparate treatment using indirect evidence, a plaintiff must first

1 establish a prima facie case that gives rise to an inference of unlawful discrimination. If the 2 plaintiff succeeds in establishing a prima facie case, the burden then shifts to the defendant 3 to articulate a legitimate, nondiscriminatory reason for its allegedly discriminatory conduct.
4 If the defendant provides such a reason, then the burden shifts back to the plaintiff to show 5 that the employer's reason is a pretext for discrimination. McDonnell Douglas Corp. v.
6 Green, 411 U.S. 792, 802-05 (1973); Vasquez v. County of Los Angeles, 349 F.3d 634, 7 640 (9th Cir. 2003). The McDonnell Douglas burden-shifting framework is also applicable
8 to claims of discrimination pursuant to California law under FEHA. See Guz v. Bechtel Nat.
9 Inc., 24 Cal.4th 317, 354 (2000).

10 Defendants argue that summary judgment should be granted as to Harris' claims for 11 discrimination because he cannot establish a prima facie case. A plaintiff may establish a 12 prima facie case of disparate treatment by showing that he belongs to a protected class; 13 that he was performing his job satisfactorily; that he suffered an adverse employment 14 action; and his employer treated him differently than a similarly situated employee who 15 does not belong to the same protected class. Cornwell, 439 F.3d at 1028 (citing McDonnell 16 Douglas, 411 U.S. at 802). The standard adopted by the California Supreme Court in the 17 FEHA analysis differs slightly in that, to establish a prima facie case, a plaintiff must also 18 demonstrate "some other circumstance" that suggests discriminatory motive. See Guz, 24 19 Cal.4th at 355.

20 Here, Harris challenges two discrete acts – the decision to place him on unpaid 21 administrative leave on March 19, 2008, and the decision to terminate him on May 16, 22 2008. Defendants argue that there is no evidence of "some other circumstance" 23 suggesting discriminatory motive as to those two discrete acts.

24 Defendants also contend that the City had legitimate reasons for taking those 25 actions, asserting that the evidence shows that the decision to place Harris on unpaid 26 administrative leave was taken in response to a report from the Nursing Director that he 27 had violated the City's workplace violence policy; and that the evidence shows that the 28 decision to terminate him was taken because he refused to comply with the

1 recommendations made by the independent investigator, despite being advised that failure 2 to do so would result in dismissal, and also refused to provide assurance that he would 3 abide by the workplace violence policy in the future.

4 At the hearing on the present motion, counsel for the City also asserted that Thomas 5 was required, under the provisions of the City Charter, to place Harris on unpaid 6 administrative leave pending the investigation, and that because the complaint by the 7 Nursing Staff had been made against Harris, but not against Bevan, it would have violated 8 the City Charter to have placed Bevan on unpaid leave at the same time.

9 Finally, defendants contend that Harris has failed to show that the City's articulated 10 reasons for its actions were a pretext for discrimination, as he has provided no evidence 11 either showing that the explanations were false, or showing that racial discrimination more 12 likely than not was the motivating factor for the City's actions.

13 The court finds that the motion must be DENIED. As an initial matter, the court finds 14 that Harris has provided evidence sufficient to establish a prima facie case with regard to 15 the suspension. "The requisite degree of proof necessary to establish a prima facie case . .
16 . on summary judgment is minimal and does not even need to rise to the level of a 17 preponderance of the evidence." Cordova v. State Farm Ins. Cos., 124 F.3d 1145, 1148
18 (9th Cir.1997).

19 Harris is a member of a protected class, he was performing his job satisfactorily, he 20 suffered an adverse action (suspension without pay pending investigation), and he was 21 treated differently than a similarly situated employee who is not a member of the protected 22 class. By contrast, Bevan, who is white, was not placed on unpaid administrative leave, 23 despite having been involved in the altercation with Harris. This is sufficient to establish the 24 fourth element of the prima facie case, whether it is characterized as "treated differently 25 than others not in the protected class" or as "some other circumstance suggesting 26 discriminatory motive."

27 The burden thus shifts to defendants to provide evidence establishing the existence 28 of a legitimate nondiscriminatory reason for the City's actions. While it is true that the City

1 has articulated a reason for suspending Harris without pay, plaintiff has raised a triable 2 issue with regard to whether the articulated reason was legitimate. Defendants rely on the 3 statements of Thomas, Bevan, and other witnesses, in an attempt to show that Harris 4 engaged in workplace violence. In particular, defendants rely on Thomas' statement in his 5 declaration that he acted based on the report from the Nursing Staff, and that he placed 6 Harris on unpaid leave pending investigation pursuant to the provision in the City Charter.

7 However, Harris flatly denies having engaged in violence, and disputes the accounts 8 of defendants' witnesses with his own statements and statements of other witnesses.

9 Although some of the evidence provided by both sides consists of inadmissible hearsay, 10 the court finds that Harris has provided evidence sufficient to create a triable issue with 11 regard to the City's proffered explanation for its actions.

12 Because defendants have not met their burden under the second step of the 13 McDonnell-Douglas analysis, the court finds it unnecessary to address the arguments 14 regarding whether the City's articulated reasons were a pretext for discrimination.

15 Finally, given the existence of a triable issue of fact regarding whether the City's 16 articulated reasons for the suspension were legitimate, and the interrelatedness of the 17 suspension and subsequent termination, the court finds that a triable issue remains as to 18 the termination as well. If Harris establishes that there was discrimination in the 19 suspension, he may be able to show that the City had no basis upon which to terminate 20 him for resisting the proposed corrective action.

21 2. Retaliation claims

22 Plaintiff alleges retaliation in violation of Title VII and FEHA based on the same two 23 discrete acts as in the claims for discrimination. When there is no direct evidence, courts 24 use the "shifting burdens" framework discussed above to address claims of retaliation.

25 Bergene v. Salt River Project Agr. Imp. and Power Dist., 272 F.3d 1136, 1140 (9th Cir.
26 2001); Flait v. North American Watch Corp., 3 Cal. App. 4th 467, 476 (1992). To make out 27 a prima facie case of retaliation, a plaintiff must demonstrate that he engaged in a 28 protected activity, that he suffered an adverse employment action, and that there was a

1 causal link between his activity and the employment decision. Stegall v. Citadel Broad.
2 Co., 350 F.3d 1061, 1065-66 (9th Cir. 2003); Iwekaogwu v. City of Los Angeles, 75 Cal.
3 App. 4th 803, 814-15 (1999).

4 If a prima facie case of retaliation is established and the employer articulates some 5 legitimate nonretaliatory reason for the challenged action, the plaintiff must demonstrate a 6 genuine issue of material fact as to whether the reason advanced by the employer was a 7 pretext. Brooks v. City of San Mateo, 229 F.3d 917, 928 (9th Cir. 2000).

8 Defendants argue that summary judgment should be granted as to the retaliation 9 claims because Harris cannot show that the City's actions were taken because he engaged 10 in protected conduct. They note that he testified in his deposition that he had engaged in 11 protected activity because he had complained about differential treatment throughout his 12 employment. However, defendants assert, there is no evidence apart from these 13 unsupported statements made at deposition, and even if he did engage in protected 14 activity, he cannot show that the City retaliated against him because of those complaints.

15 The court finds that the motion must be DENIED. Harris engaged in protected 16 activity by attempting to file a complaint of violence in the workplace against Bevan on 17 September 10, 2007 and again on March 20, 2008, and was thereafter subjected to an 18 adverse action (suspension without pay). He also engaged in protected activity by filing the 19 administrative charges of discrimination on May 6, 2008, and was thereafter subjected to 20 an adverse action (termination).

21 Defendants argue that Harris has failed to show any causal link between any 22 protected activity and the employment actions at issue, or that the City's articulated 23 reasons for its actions are pretextual. Defendants argue that Harris' evidence consists of 24 the mere allegation that he complained to Thomas about Bevan, that he filed administrative 25 charges, and that he filed the present action, and that he was placed on unpaid leave and 26 then terminated, and that there must be a causal link between his complaints and the City's 27 actions. Defendants contend that Harris' argument is nothing more than pure speculation, 28 and that he has provided no evidence to rebut the City's articulated non-discriminatory

1 reason for its actions.

2 The question of a “causal link” is always difficult to disprove when, as here, there is 3 temporal proximity between the complaint and the adverse action. “The causal link 4 between a protected activity and the alleged retaliatory action can be inferred from the 5 timing alone where there is a close proximity between the two.” Thomas v. City of 6 Beaverton, 379 F.3d 802, 812 (9th Cir. 2004); see also Clark County Sch. Dist. v. Breeden, 7 532 U.S. 268, 273 (2001) (temporal proximity alone may establish evidence of causation, 8 but the temporal proximity must be “very close”).

9 While it is causation, not temporal proximity itself, that is an element of plaintiff's 10 prima facie case – with temporal proximity merely providing an evidentiary basis from which 11 an inference can be drawn, Porter v. Calif. Dep't of Corr., 419 F.3d 885, 895 (9th Cir. 2005) 12 – the court finds that plaintiff in the present case has provided sufficient evidence to meet 13 the requirements of the prima facie case.

14 As for defendants' articulation of a non-discriminatory reason for its actions, the 15 same analysis applies as in the discrimination claims.

16 3. Harassment claim

17 Defendants contend that summary judgment is warranted on the FEHA harassment 18 claim because plaintiff cannot show that he was subjected to conduct based on race that 19 was so severe or pervasive so as to alter the conditions of employment.

20 To prevail on a racial harassment claim under FEHA, Harris must establish that he 21 was subjected to offensive comments or other abusive conduct that was clearly based on 22 his race or color, and that the conduct was sufficiently severe or pervasive as to alter the 23 conditions of his employment. Aguilar v. Avis Rent A Car System, Inc., 21 Cal. 4th 121, 24 130 (1999). He must show a “concerted pattern of harassment of a repeated, routine, or 25 generalized nature.” Id. at 131. Occasional, sporadic, or trivial acts are not sufficient to alter 26 the conditions of employment and create a hostile work environment. Id. at 130-31.

27 Defendants argue that summary judgment should be granted because there is no 28 evidence that Thomas' recommendation that Harris be placed on unpaid administrative

1 leave and that he be terminated were motivated by race, and because there is no evidence 2 that Harris' workplace environment was permeated by severe or pervasive conduct that 3 would amount to workplace harassment.

4 Defendants note that Harris conceded in his deposition that neither Thomas nor 5 Bevan ever uttered any racial slur or made any other comment about Harris' race, and also 6 note that none of Harris' witnesses were able to come up with any derogatory comments
7 that were made to Harris, and that the SEIU Local 1021 union representative confirmed 8 that Harris never told him that either Thomas or Beven ever made any comments about his 9 (Harris') race.

10 In opposition, Harris argues that the record shows that he was subjected to 11 harassment on account of his race. He claims that beginning in September 2007, Bevan 12 "initiated a pattern of violence in the workplace abuse" against him, which was allowed and 13 ratified by Thomas and the City. Harris asserts that the actions of Thomas and the City 14 also included a continuing refusal to accept his complaints about Bevan, and that he was 15 subjected to a "reign of terror" in connection with his attempts to retain his employment.

16 The court finds that the motion must be GRANTED, because Harris has failed to 17 meet his burden of showing that he was subjected to unwelcome conduct based on his 18 race or color that was so severe or pervasive as to alter the terms and conditions of 19 employment. With regard to Harris' claim that "the record" shows that he was subjected to 20 harassment on account of his race, he has cited to no specific fact in the record to make 21 this showing. Moreover, Harris has conceded that neither Thomas nor Bevan ever uttered 22 any racial slur or made any comments about his race, and none of the witnesses who 23 testified could point to any such comments by Thomas or Bevan.

24 4. Section 1981 claim

25 Defendants argue that the § 1981 claim must be dismissed because § 1981 applies 26 to discrimination with respect to contracts, and Harris was a public employee whose 27 employment was governed by statute, not contract. In addition, defendants assert that the 28 City cannot be held vicariously liable under § 1981 for any alleged discriminatory or

1 retaliatory conduct by Thomas or Bevan because Thomas and Bevan are not final 2 policymakers with respect to the employment decisions at issue.

3 The court declines to rule on the first ground argued by the City, as the law appears 4 unsettled on the question whether a California public-entity employee may assert a § 1981
5 claim against his/her employer. It is clearly established under California law that a public 6 employee cannot bring a claim for breach of contract or breach of implied contract against 7 the public entity that employs him. See Miller v. State of California, 18 Cal. 3d 808, 813
8 (1977); Hill v. City of Long Beach, 33 Cal. App. 4th 1684, 1690 (1995). It is not so clearly 9 established, however, that a California public employee cannot bring a § 1981 claim 10 against the public entity that employs him.

11 For example, in Zimmerman v. City and County of San Francisco, 2000 WL 12 1071830 (N.D. Cal., July 27, 2000), the court held that because a § 1981 claim must be 13 based on a contractual relationship, and because the terms and conditions of public 14 employment in California are determined by law, not by contract, the plaintiff (a civil service 15 employee) could not establish a claim under § 1981. Id., 2000 WL 1071830 at *10.

In Barefield v. California State University, Bakersfield, 2006 WL 829122 (E.D. Cal., March 28, 2006), the court cited Zimmerman, concluding that because California law finds state employment to be statutory, not contractual, the plaintiff could not maintain a claim under § 1981.² The Barefield court relied primarily on a 1989 decision, Judie v. Hamilton, 872 F.2d 919 (9th Cir. 1989), in which the Ninth Circuit applied a three-part test derived from Burnett v. Grattan, 468 U.S. 42 (1981), to hold that a public employee in the State of Washington had “no cognizable claim for violation of the right to contract under § 1981.” Judie, 872 F.2d at 923 (citing Burnett, 468 U.S. at 47³).

² The court notes that in Pittman v. Oregon, Employment Dep’t., 509 F.3d 1065, 1069 (9th Cir. 2007), the Ninth Circuit ruled that states are immune from § 1981 claims under the Eleventh Amendment.

³ Under the Burnett test, if no suitable federal rule exists, courts should consider the application of state common law, as modified and changed by the constitution and statutes of the forum state, but only to the extent that state law is not inconsistent with the Constitution and laws of the United States. Id.

1 More recently, however, district courts in this Circuit have held that public employees
2 should not be foreclosed from proceeding with § 1981 claims. See, e.g., Byrd v. California
3 Sup. Court, County of Marin, 2009 WL 2031761, at *6-7 (N.D. Cal., July 8, 2009); Peterson
4 v. State of Calif. Dep't of Corrections and Rehabilitation, 451 F.Supp. 2d 1092, 1101-04
5 (E.D. Cal. 2006); Lukovsky v. City and County of San Francisco, 2006 WL 436142, at *2-4 6 (N.D. Cal., Feb. 21, 2006).

7 In all three of these decisions, the courts applied the analysis from Judie, but also 8 cited a 2003 decision, White v. Davis, 30 Cal. 4th 528 (2003), in which the California
9 Supreme Court reviewed a series of California cases that had imposed contractual duties 10 on public employers, including the right of an employee to remain in an office, the right to 11 continuation of civil service status, the right to payment of a salary that has been earned, 12 and the right to retain an accrued pension. See, e.g., Lukovsky, 2006 WL 436142 at *3
13 (citing White, 30 Cal. 4th at 656-66).⁴

14 These courts also concluded that because there is a clear federal policy expressed 15 in the civil rights statutes to prevent employment discrimination by governmental entities, 16 the third part of the Burnett test, as adopted by Judie, requires that public employees be 17 permitted to pursue § 1981 claims against their employers.

18 Judie was decided prior to the 1991 amendment of § 1981, and the Ninth Circuit has 19 provided no guidance since that time in any reported decision. In light of the absence of 20 recent direction, and the fact that different courts have taken opposite approaches, the 21 court is reluctant to grant defendants' motion as to the first ground, particularly since the 22 second ground argued by defendants is meritorious.

23 The court finds, however, that the motion must be GRANTED as to the second 24 ground argued by defendants. As with claims under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, a municipality may 25

26 _____
27 ⁴ The Lukovsky court also appears to have borrowed the reasoning adopted by the 28 Ninth Circuit in a 2002 unreported decision, Ramirez v. Kroonen, 44 Fed. Appx. 212, 2002 WL 1837932 (9th Cir., Aug. 12, 2002), where the court held that the fact that the plaintiff was a public employee did not bar him from proceeding with a § 1981 claim of failure to promote.

1 be held liable for § 1981 claims only if the plaintiff alleges and proves that his injury resulted 2 from a municipal policy, practice, or custom. Federation of African Am. Contrs. v. City of 3 Oakland, 96 F.3d 1204, 1214-15 (1996) (1991 amendment to § 1981 preserves “policy or 4 custom” requirement in suits against state actors). There is no respondeat superior liability
5 for § 1981 claims. Id. Under the rule articulated in Monell v. Dept. of Social Services, 436 6 U.S. 658 (1978), municipalities are answerable only for their own decisions, and cannot be 7 held vicariously liable for the constitutional torts of their agents. See id. at 691.

8 A plaintiff satisfies the principles of Monell liability by demonstrating that an “official 9 municipal policy” of some sort caused the constitutional tort in question. A plaintiff can 10 demonstrate this in one of three ways: by showing that the alleged violation in question 11 was committed by the employee pursuant to a longstanding practice or custom; by showing 12 that the employee causing the violation in question has “final policymaking authority;” or by 13 showing that the employee causing the violation had his or her actions “ratified” by the “final 14 policymaker.” See, e.g., Christie v. Iopa, 176 F.3d 1231, 1235-40 (9th Cir. 1999).

15 Here, in his opposition to the City’s motion, Harris has not cited a single piece of 16 evidence that supports the existence of any City custom or policy, that establishes that 17 Thomas or Bevan had final policymaking authority, or that shows that their actions were 18 ratified by any person or body with final policymaking authority.

19 As to the first point, Harris has submitted no evidence establishing the existence of 20 any official municipal policy. In discovery, when the City requested that Harris identify the 21 policy, practice, or custom that caused his injuries, he did not identify any specific policy of 22 the City, the CSC, or the Department of Public Health. Instead, he repeated his allegation 23 that he had been placed on unpaid administrative leave, and then terminated, which he 24 asserts constituted a pattern of discrimination and harassment.

25 As to the second point, Harris argues that Thomas and Nursing Director Mivic Hirose 26 were the final policymakers, who made the decisions re suspension and termination. The 27 fact that a city employee has independent decision-making power does not render him a 28 final policymaker for purposes of municipal liability. “If the mere exercise of discretion by

1 an employee could give rise to a constitutional violation, the result would be 2 indistinguishable from respondeat superior liability.” City of St. Louis v. Praprotnik, 485
3 U.S. 112, 126 (1988); see also Pembaur v. City of Cincinnati, 475 U.S. 469, 484 & n.12 4 (1986).

5 The identification of policymaking officials is a question of state law. Christie, 176 6 F.3d at 1235. Under California law, a city’s Charter determines municipal affairs such as 7 personnel matters. Hyland v. Wonder, 117 F.3d 405, 414 (9th Cir. 1997). The Charter of 8 the City and County of San Francisco makes clear that the Civil Service Commission 9 (“CSC”) is the final policymaker with respect to employment matters. Section 10.100 10 states that the CSC “is charged with the duty of providing qualified persons for appointment 11 to the service of the City and County.”

12 Further, § 10.101 makes it the responsibility of the CSC to adopt “rules, policies and 13 procedures” to govern an exhaustive list of topics relating to city employment. The CSC 14 has exercised this grant of power by adopting numerous rules on an exhaustive list of 15 employment issues including but not limited to appointment to civil service positions, equal 16 opportunity and employer-employee relations, layoff, and separation. See, e.g., Civil 17 Service Commission Rules 103, 110, 114, 121, 122.13

18 As to the third point, Harris argues that Thomas, as the employee making the final 19 decision regarding the suspension and termination, had his actions ratified by the final 20 policymaker (which he now seems to agree was the CSC), because the CSC ratified the 21 restrictions placed on Harris’ future employment with the City. Nevertheless, as defendants 22 assert, Harris has provided no evidence that the CSC actually ratified Harris’ decision. The 23 document that plaintiff cites in support of his argument, Exhibit G to the Thomas 24 Declaration, does not reflect any such ratification, but rather simply advises plaintiff that he 25 has 20 days to request a hearing for review of his employment restrictions by the CSC, 26 adding, “If you do not request a hearing or file an appeal, the Human Resources Director 27 will take final administrative action and the restriction(s) recommended, if any, will be in 28 effect.”

1 Harris cannot show that the CSC delegated final policymaking authority to Thomas, 2 and he concedes he cannot show that it was delegated to Bevan. The Commission 3 explicitly retains the final word with respect to employment matters. The Charter gives the 4 CSC jurisdiction over virtually every conceivable personnel action. See Charter §10.101.
5 As the final policymaker for personnel matters, the CSC is free to delegate broad 6 operational authority to a municipal department – including authority over personnel policy 7 – without turning that department into a “final policymaker” for purposes of municipal 8 liability. Praprotnik, 485 U.S. at 127-28; Pembaur, 475 U.S. at 484 & n.12.

9 Thus, even had Harris provided some evidence that the Department of Public Health 10 or Thomas had a “policy” with respect to the practices identified in his discovery responses, 11 that evidence would be insufficient as a matter of law to support a finding of municipal 12 liability in the absence, as here, of evidence of a delegation of authority.

13 C. Objections to Evidence

14 Both Harris and defendants have filed extensive objections to the evidence 15 submitted by the other side. Harris objects to most of the statements in the declarations of 16 Dr. Austin, Ms. Lunsford, Mr. Ramirez, and defendant Thomas on the ground that much of 17 what they report concerning the September 2007 and March 2008 incidents, and the 18 events that followed, is based on statements of other persons, and is therefore inadmissible 19 hearsay. Harris also objects to many of the statements on the grounds that they are not 20 based on personal knowledge or that they lack relevance.

21 Defendants object to many, if not all, of the statements in the declarations of Harris, 22 Joycelyn Harris, Ms. Mace, Mr. Glover, Charlene Oler, Dr. Zacher, and Ms. Rutherford, on 23 numerous grounds, including hearsay, relevance, improper opinion testimony, lack of 24 personal knowledge, and lack of foundation,

25 The court has not relied on any of the disputed evidence to grant or to deny 26 summary judgment. The court has denied summary judgment as to the discrimination and 27 retaliation claims because triable issues exist regarding the reason or motivation behind the 28 differences in the treatment of Harris and Bevan. The court has granted summary

1 judgment as to the harassment and § 1981 claims because Harris has failed to meet his 2 burden under either claim, as explained above. To the extent that the court may have 3 considered some of the disputed evidence in finding that triable issues exist regarding the 4 discrimination and retaliation claims, the objections are OVERRULED.

5 CONCLUSION

6 In accordance with the foregoing, the court DENIES the motion as to the claims of 7 discrimination and retaliation under Title VII and FEHA, and GRANTS the motion as to the 8 claim of discrimination and retaliation under 42 U.S.C. § 1981 and the claim of harassment
9 under FEHA. The parties are referred by separate order for a mandatory settlement 10 conference.
